Weather wears on

BYU Security Officer Cliff Grover, a sophomore from Sacramento, Calif., majoring in accounting, scrapes the "fair to partly cloudy" from the rear windshield of a car to check the parking sticker. Security has not been daunted by the bad weather in enforcing the parking violations on campus, even if they have to dig a little.

According to the National Weather Service, snow is expected at times today, decreasing tonight and Friday. Lows tonight 5-20 with highs in the upper teens and lower 20s. Friday's highs will be in the 20s and lower 30s.

Khomeini ends exile

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Ayatullah Ruhollah Khomeini returned home early today after more than 14 years of exile to pursue his dream of replacing Iran's 2,500-year-old monarchy with an Islamic republic.

As the chartered Air France jetliner landed the bearded, 78-year-old religious leader of the revolution against Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, a million excited followers lined the 11-mile route he was to take from the airport to Tehran's largest cemetery where he was to speak.

Six tanks guarded the entrance to the airport, and the crowd made no attempt to get on to the field. But the army was keeping a low profile, leaving the policing of the airport to the normal security force there, while 50,000 "Islamic police" designated by the welcoming committee maintained order along the route to the cemetery.

However, in advance of Khomeini's arrival, leaders of the armed forces paraded tanks and troops through Tehran Wednesday to show that the decision to allow him to return did not signal surrender by the government of Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar.

Khomeini issued a brief statement before leaving Paris, thanking the French government and saying, "I leave your country to go and serve my country."

A spokesman for Khomeini conceded that, after reports reached Paris of troops taking up new positions near Tehran's airport, some followers urged him to postpone his return.

"But the ayatullah has made his decision and that is it," the spokesman, Sadegh Ghotbzadegh, told reporters earlier Wednesday in Paris.

Before it was announced that the ayatullah had left, Bakhtiar said Iran was in a "very critical and dangerous period." He told Iranians in a radio and television broadcast that the government would "resist chaos and doubtful elements." He said: "The government will not permit the reins of the country to be held by anyone except the central government."

Three anti-government demonstrators, including two shot by troops near volatile Tehran University, were killed Wednesday, hospital sources said.

Gunfire echoed near Jaleh Square. Officials at Jorjani Hospital near Jaleh Square said one person had died of gunshot wounds received at a demonstration.

Witnesses said they saw at least five ambulances speed away from the university area, and a hospital spokesman at Pahlavi Hospital said two other persons were dead from rubber bullets fired by troops. Three more were wounded, the sources said.

The witnesses said troops in armored vehicles opened fire after crowds near the university accused them of supporting the shah. More than 40 people have been killed in the university area in the pastweek.

Gen. Abbas Gharabaghi, who heads Iran's 430,000-man army, said the military display was a routine troop movement, but soldiers told bystanders it was intended to impress the populace with the army's strength.

Bakhtiar has warned of "agents and enemies" posing a threat to the ayatullah's life. In his broadcast, he said, "every drop of blood shed ... will rest on the shoulders of those who plot and plan a confrontation between the army and the people who are trained to misuse the peaceful spirit of this government."

Teng calls for unity to thwart Soviets

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping on Wednesday urged the United States, Japan, Western Europe and the Third World to join China in "solid, down-to-earth united action" to thwart Soviet aggression around the world.

In separate interviews with American print reporters and television correspondents, the Chinese leader suggested this might mean acting in concert to deny the Russians "strategic resources and dependable bases" for waging aggression.

To deter Soviet aggression — which he called "the main hotbed of war" — Teng said: "What we need is not this or that treaty or resolution, but solid, down-to-earth united action."

Nearing the end of his three-day official visit to Washington, Teng said he did not specifically propose the idea to President Carter. "I just said that we must deal in a down-to-earth way with the Soviet hegemony," he said.

In Moscow, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda, in a commentary carried by the official news agency Tass, accused Teng of "impudently lecturing the Carter administration" on the wisdom of signing as arms control agreement with the Russians. Pravda said Teng "attacked everything which lies at the basis of the efforts of states to ensure a stalbe and lasting peace."

Teng also denounced Cuba for making trouble in Africa in behalf of the Russians, and criticized the Soviet-backed Vietnamese as "the Cubans of the Orient" for their invasion of Cambodia.

The Chinese leader sidestepped a question, however, of whether China would intervene militarily to support its ally, Cambodia. "Any action taken by the Chinese is through careful consideration," he said. "We will not take any rash action."

"We hold the view that the danger of war comes from the Soviet Union," Teng said, repeating a theme he sounded at a reception Tuesday night in which he accused the Soviets of threatening a new world war.

Teng struck at the Russians anew at a luncheon meeting with American reporters at his guest quarters and at midafternoon with television interviewers, shortly before joining President Carter in the White House East Room to sign scientific, cultural and consular agreements with the United States.

The accords, aimed at boosting China's great leap toward modernization, reportedly focused on space, agricultural research and student exchanges.

Injunction issued

Cullimore fights back

By D. SCOTT SMITH
Universe Staff Writer

An injunction has been issued prohibiting the appointment of a new ASBYU Attorney General by Gregory T. Pope, ASBYU Supreme Court Justice.

Pope issued the injunction upon evidence presented by Kirk Cullimore, former ASBYU attorney general. The ASBYU Executive Council Monday voted to remove Cullimore from his position.

In a statement issued Wednesday night, Pope said he would call a hearing for Feb. 6. to address the questions of due process, equal protection, and failure to show just cause in the removal of Cullimore by the ASBYU Executive Council.

Cullimore said by due processs "we are inferring that they (the Executive Council) did not follow a proper judicial process." He explained that removing someone from office requires following judicial procedure.

As examples, he cited Utah's "Sunshine Law," which makes it illegal for a public official to hold a private meeting over matters concerning the public.

Cullimore also called upon the ASBYU constitution which says, "The regular Executive Council meeting shall be open to all members of the ASBYU. Those meetings declared 'Executive Session' by the ASBYU President shall be closed to the ASBYU."

Cullimore said since they did not label the Monday meeting as an Executive Session, "it should not have been closed."

Sterling Deuel, ASBYU Athletics vice president who was not at the meeting when the action was taken against Cullimore, said he was not notified of the meeting until 20 minutes before the meeting began. He added that had he been present, he would have objected to the decision.

Cullimore further asserted that he was denied his rights under the equal protection laws. "The United States assures the defendant the right to be confronted by his accusers," he said. "Although we are not the United States, we insinuate that we are a democratic government, and should follow the same guidelines as a democratic government."

The final reason for issuing the injunction, according to Cullimore, was the council's failure to show "just cause."

"The only public notification of removal (released by the council) failed to be substantiated with facts — which was one of the things they accused me of," Cullimore said.

ASBYU President Perry Bratt, who did not receive the injunction until 7 p.m. Wednesday said, "I have not had a chance to talk to the Executive Council, or others involved to make any definite decision as to what actions or procedures to take."

The implications of the injunction are that no attorney general can be appointed by Bratt until after the summary hearing. This would mean another delay in the traffic court system, and according to Pope, traffic courts could be held off indefinitely.

Although Cullimore initially said his removal was "in the best interest," he said he is now encouraging the injunction because, "I want to clear my name."

Officials report on Singer death

By DONNA ROUVIERE
Universe Staff Writer

MARION, Utah — The Summit County Attorney's office has completed an investigation into the shooting of polygamist John Singer and will release a report on the probe by the end of this week or the beginning of next week.

The investigation was done under the direction of the Utah Attorney General's office in response to 28 questions submitted by the "Concerned Citizens for the Singer Family."

Summit County Attorney Robert Adkins said he and assistant county attorney Terry Christiansen interviewed the 10 officers involved and three neighbors who were witnesses to at least part of the shooting.

"The story the neighbors are telling is consistant with what the officers said," Christiansen told The Daily Universe. "I have no reason to discount that anyone is telling the truth."

According to Adkins, 10 officers from the Liquor Control Commission, the Summit County Sheriff's Office and the Utah Highway Patrol were involved in the Singer arrest attempt. Adkins refused to reveal how many officers from each agency participated or the names of the officers involved.

Adkins and Christiansen gave the following account of the Jan. 18 shooting:

Singer left his home shortly after noon to pick up his mail down at the end of the lane, removing the snow from the road with a gas-powered blower. Leaving the blower by the side of the lane, he picked up his mail and started back.

Police, observing from a vacant house in the neighborhood, saw him pick up the mail. Two pairs of officers on two snowmobiles started after him, turning left into the lane from the main Upper Loop Road. Two more pairs of officers on two snowmobiles moved toward Singer from the hills to the southeast of the lane, but they were stopped by a fence. A fifth snowmobile carrying two officers moved from the house used as headquarters for the surveillance. The house was located between the cluster of houses on the north side of the lane. The officer on the back of this vehicle fell off. The snowmobile then malfunctioned and stopped moving.

According to Adkins's account, only the men on the two snowmobiles following Singer up the lane were involved in the shooting. Both vehicles entered the lane, with the one on the right veering in a circle to the south of the lane and moving toward Singer from the side.

The officers shouted repeatedly at Singer to stop and identified themselves as police. Singer turned around, pulled a .380 automatic pistol and pointed it first at one of the snowmobiles and then at the other. When he pointed the gun at the snowmobile to the south, an officer on the snowmobile in the lane opened fire with a 12-gauge shotgun. The single shot hit Singer in the right back from 35 to 40 feet away.

Immediately following the shooting, Singer was loaded into the cab of a four-wheel drive truck belonging to an officer and taken to the Coalville Hospital.

H. Jerry Bradshaw, Utah County's newest Commissioner, believes federal regulations such as a voluminous water study done by the Environmental Protection Agency shows how County powers are being eroded by the U.S. Congress.

Bradshaw raps liberal congress

By RICHARD BURGSTROM
Universe Staff Writer

"In county government today, our greatest problem is the liberal influence of the United States Congress."

H. Jerry Bradshaw, Utah County's newest commissioner, spoke about the problems currently facing the county as he sat in his third floor office of the county building. He was elected in November and took office Jan. 1.

According to Commissioner Bradshaw, congress has been continually taking away the rights of counties.

"Our statutory powers are being eroded by mandates from the U.S. Congress," he said. "Our greatest dilemma is attempting to maintain a reasonable appearance of local government."

Bradshaw said local government suffers because congress passes legislation affecting the county and then turns it over to agencies who issue regulations, guidelines and monthly memos.

"We're asked to be the enforcement agency, whereas someone else does the planning and someone else does the monitoring. So citizens who have been broadly affected by the act are angry at local government, which merely enforces the provisions," Bradshaw said.

As an example of federal regulation, the 47-year-old commissioner, pulled a stack of books about one and one-half feet high from a cabinet and set it on his desk.

"This is the Environmental Protection Agency 208 water study," Bradshaw said. "They're regulations concerning water, all types of water, in our county."

In addition to the regulations, Bradshaw continued, Washington sends out memos to the EPA's regional office in Denver, which sends them to the area agency, the Mountainlands Association of Government office in Provo. They implement them in the county.

"We are essentially the enforcing arm of the EPA," he said.

According to Bradshaw, this bill and others like it establishes a new level of government not in the state or federal constitution, and over which the citizen has little control.

"We're setting up another level of government —an avenue of influence in the local government — called an Area-Wide Planning Agency, over which the voter has no control," the commissioner said. "They can take me out of office, they can take the other commissioners out of office, and yet this agency will continue on."

Bradshaw emphasized that he is for "good water," but added that local government should have a say in the matter.

"This 208 water study is predicted to cost the taxpayers of Utah County $180 million over a 20 year period for its implementation," Bradshaw said. "When I asked if they knew what the economic impact on the community of the study's implementation would be, they said 'no'."

Some federal programs sent to counties are optional, according to Bradshaw. For instance the commission just turned down a program to establish housing for migratory workers in Utah. Many programs, like the 208 study however, are not optional.

"I hadn't realized the federal government had taken over so much," he said.

This is the commissioner's first public office.

As a county commissioner, Bradshaw has the responsibility to supervise various county departments, and draw up ordinances and laws.

Before he was elected last November, Bradshaw worked at BYU for 13 years. He was in the division of instructional services, on the administrative staff of the library, and on the faculty at the library.

While earning a bachelor's and master's degrees, he met his wife at BYU. They were married in 1959 in the LDS Salt Lake Temple and are the parents of five children.

Iranian strife worries Israel

TEL AVIV (AP) - The strife in Iran casts a dark shadow over Israel by complicating talks with Egypt, threatening energy supplies, possibly endangering Iranian Jews and undoing a rare tie between the Jewish state and a Moslem nation.

When demonstrators in Tehran burned portraits of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, Israel saw a major, though silent supporter of Israel under attack. Now that the shah has been driven from his country, there is deep concern here over what comes next.

Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan worries that Iran's surge of Islamic fundamentalism may spread to Arab nations, including its peace-talks partner, Egypt.

"It is like throwing a stone in a lake," Dayan said this week in his first public speech on the subject. "The waves around it are really spreading toward all Arab countries ... We have to give some thought to what kind of Middle East we might see in a few years time."

Father fights to teach children

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — A divorced father went to court Wednesday to fight a judge's ruling that prevents him from telling his young daughters there is no Santa Claus, no Easter Bunny and no Tooth Fairy.

Wayne F. Felton, 35, a firefighter who belongs to the Jehovah's Witnesses religious sect, asked a state appeals court to overturn a lower court order that he stop reading the Bible to his daughters and talking to them about his fundamentalist views of Christianity.

Hampden Probate Judge Frank Placzek on Tuesday had ordered Felton to either stop discussing religion with his daughters on visiting days or forfeit his right to see them.

Felton had asked for the court hearing to obtain a finding of contempt against his exwife for denying him visiting privileges with Deborah, 7, and Jennifer, 4.

Did Shah urge civil war?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A voice identified as that of the Shah of Iran says in a secretly recorded conversation that his advisers should see that civil war is started to ensure the survival of his reign, a Los Angeles television station said Wednesday in a copyright story.

Station KNXT said it obtained the tape, also broadcast on CBS, from a dissident Iranian student it did not identify. The recording was in Farsi, the language of Iran.

The voice on the 15-minute tape has been verified by three top voice identification experts as that of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, according to KNXT. The station said the tape was of a meeting between the shah and group of his advisers "within days" before he left Iran two weeks ago.

KNXT said the person purported to be the shah also condemned his secret police for not being brutal enough. That police force, known by the acronym SAVAK, has been criticized by anti-shah forces as having brutalized Iranian citizens.

Cult leader acquitted

PRICE, Utah (AP) — Edward Thomas Marston, the stepson of a fugitive polygamist cult leader, was acquitted Wednesday of second-degree murder in the slaying of rival cult leader Robert Simons.

The eight-man, four-woman jury deliberated about two hours before returning the verdict of innocent at 6:30 p.m.

Marston, 23, stepson of Ervil LeBaron, had testified earlier that he had never met Simons and that another member of the cult — prosecution witness Don Sullivan — had admitted the April 1975 shotgun slaying of Simons.

The two are accused of forcing Ray Applegate, a former Soldier Summit resident now living in Oklahoma, to give false testimony last year in an assault charge against Anderson.

Utah demanding balanced budget

By LARRY WERNER
Universe Staff Writer

Utah will join 25 other states in calling for a constitutional convention to balance the federal budget, and the state's handicapped and aged will have legal recourse against job discrimination as the result of action in the State Legislature Wednesday.

The State Senate passed 21-7 a resolution calling for Congress to pass an amendment to the constitution requiring a balanced budget. Law experts appearing before the Senate said if nine more states call for the measure and Congress doesn't act, a constitutional convention must be called for the purpose.

Opponents of the resolution asserted that a constitutional convention would be dangerous because the document could be amended in other areas besides budget requirements. In compromise, the resolution passed with an amendment sponsored by Sen. Darrell Renstrom, D-Ogden, that will withdraw it should the convention meet to consider any other amendment besides budget limitation.

The resolution sailed through both houses last week, but the Senate recalled it for further consideration.

Proponents say that Congress will act on an amendment before enough states have passed resolutions calling for the convention. Rep. Gary Brockbank, R-Salt Lake City, and sponsor of the resolution, said it is intended to give leverage to the demand of a balanced budget. Sen. Karl N. Snow, Jr., R-Provo, a BYU professor, opposed the idea.

"We've been told that Congress wouldn't go through with it — that this is to push them in that direction. I think that's dangerous," he said. "We don't know what kind of amendments could come out of that convention."

Two University of Utah law professors took opposing views on whether a convention could be limited by Congress to a single issue. Jefferson Fordham, dean of the law school, said the call for a convention could not be limited, while Van Alstyne said that it could.

On the other side of the Legislature, the House, after a long debate, passed 54-16 a bill prohibiting job discrimination against the handicapped and the aged. The bill, sponsored by Sen. Frances Farley, D-Salt Lake City, was amended to provide that persons 40 years of age or older could not be discriminated against, with the exception of statutory retirement regulations.

"We have people in the state who don't want to be on the welfare roles — people who want to work. Give these people the rightful opportunity to work, earn a living and be responsible in our community," Rep. Charles L. Doane, R-Salt Lake City, said.

Opponents said the bill would create administrative problems and loopholes.

Health care plan revealed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration's tentative national health insurance plan would guarantee every American basic protection against illness, either through a private insurance policy or a government-run program along the lines of Medicare.

The plan would require everyone to carry a standard benefit package that would pay at least 75 percent of the cost of all hospital bills, physicians' fees, prescription drugs, outpatient, laboratory and X-ray services and treatment for alcoholics, drug addicts and the mentally ill.

Portions of the plan, called HealthCare, were obtained by The Associated Press.

Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano, Jr. insisted Tuesday that Carter is keeping his options open and has not committed himself to proposing the plan.

However, sources who asked not to be identified said, "This is the only option now before the president."

Other sources said Carter may change a number of elements in the plan or alter the phasing schedule.

A summary of the plan says, "Individuals enrolled in either HealthCare or private plans would be covered for the same standard benefit package and treated equally by health service providers, because all insurance plans would reimburse providers at the same rates."

Full implementation of the plan might take years under the proposed phase-in schedule beginning in 1983.

Sources familiar with the plan said even after it is fully implemented, families able to would be required to pay 25 percent of all expenses up to a limit of $1,500 a year.

The rates paid to providers would be set each year by the secretary of HEW and a special rate negotiation board made up of providers, consumers and insurance companies.

The government also would establish a special reinsurance program to underwrite all catastrophic health costs so no individual or company could be bankrupted by huge, unanticipated costs.

To finance the plan, employers would pay a minimum of 75 percent of the premium for each employee.

The poor, unemployed, uninsurable and elderly would be guaranteed insurance through HealthCare, even if they couldn't afford to pay a premium, and the cost of that coverage would be paid from general tax funds.

The plan doesn't carry a specific price tag, and much still depends on how it would be implemented, but earlier government estimates for a similar program said it would take "a rough minimum" of $40 billion in new money to pay for the proposed system. The federal government, which already pays $57 billion in health care costs for Medicare and its share of Medicaid, would have to meet about $30 billion of the additional costs of HealthCare, and employers would be required to pay the rest.

In 1971 she became co-founder and first president of the Arizona Right to Life Committee, a position she held until 1973. She has served since then as the director from the state of Arizona to the Washington based National Right to Life Committee. She was a member of the first Executive Committee which drew up the original N.R.L.C. by-laws early in 1973. Dr. Gerster has served as vice-president of this national organization (1973-1975), Chairman of the Board of Directors (1975-78), and was elected to the presidency in June 1978.

Dr. Carolyn F. Gerster is a physician in active practice with her husband, Dr. Josef Gerster, specializing in internal medicine and cardio-pulmonary diseases. She was born in San Francisco, California, received her Bachelor of Science degree at the University of Oregon, and her Doctor of Medicine at the University of Oregon Medical School in Portland, Oregon. After completing three years residency training in Internal Medicine she volunteered for two years as a medical officer in the United States Army and was stationed in France and Germany in 1958.

Dr. Gerster is the mother of five sons. She is a Protestant and a communicant of the Episcopalian Church.

Map indicates scene of the Jan. 18 shooting of polygamist John Singer. A report on an investigation of the incident by the Summit County Attorney's Office will be released by the end of this or the beginning of next week.

Singer investigation reported by officials

"They simply hoped that by the show of force he would realize there was no other way out," Christiansen said. The plan apparently backfired when the snowmobile to the north of the lane quit running and the two to the south were stopped at the fence.

Adkins said the three witnesses to the incident were Mrs. Richard Watson, Mrs. Donald Jepson and Jared Weller. All three are members of the Weller family which holds the legal title to the land on which Singer's farm is located, as well as the surrounding property.

None of the witnesses saw the actual shooting, Adkins said. Mrs. Watson told the Universe she was in her car parked in the driveway when she saw the snowmobiles, and saw Singer point a gun, but she turned her head and did not see the actual shooting.

Mrs. Jepson said she saw Singer going to get his mail and went into the bedroom to get her own coat and go to the mailbox. She was in the bedroom when she heard the shot.

Adkins said Weller, the third witness, was working in his repair shop down the road when he heard a commotion and went to the scene of the killing to investigate.

The account given by the attorney's office contradicts earlier reports that Singer was on his way to the mailbox when the shooting occurred. However, it supports Singer's second wife Shirley Black's statement that after the shooting, his mail was found lying near his hat on the road.

None of the officers was wearing any protective clothing, Adkins said, except for one highway patrolman who had on a crash helmet. Some were in the uniforms of their agencies and some in plain clothes. Some of the officers were wearing jackets with the word "POLICE" written in about four-inch high letters.

Singer was shot with a 12-gauge shotgun with a 26 to 28-inch barrel, a type commonly carried in police cars, Adkins said.

Even though the police knew Singer was armed and there was a possibility of someone being hurt, an ambulance was not on the scene because "the officers did not know when they were going to attempt the arrest," Christiansen said. "You could have had an ambulance on the scene for 18 days."

The house used by the police during the 18 days of surveillance belonged to the Weller family and was rented by Summit County, Adkins said. Members of the Weller family said earlier the house belonged to some people in Salt Lake City. According to county records, the property the house is on is in the name of Sam Weller, who is a resident of Salt Lake City.

"People don't realize," said Christiansen, "Singer wasn't shot because of his criticism of the schools. He was shot because he drew a loaded weapon and aimed it at the officers. It is not an issue whether John Singer knew they were police officers. They specifically indicated 'Throw down the weapon.'"

The current agreement worked out by the state for Vickie Singer to educate her children under the administration of a local private school is the same as a proposal made earlier and refused by Singer, Christiansen said. "If John Singer had come in and agreed to it before, the court order would have been dropped," he said.

Student defender decides to resign

An ASBYU student defender has turned in a letter of resignation to the ASBYU Executive Council.

John Rozier, a senior majoring in business management from Fresno, Calif., said the decision was in response to pressure from Perry Bratt.

He said in his resignation, "I do so under pressure either to commit more time or to resign — I feel this is my only alternative in the interest of the office."

"The pressure from Bratt was justified," said Rozier. "He has the right to see that certain things are done because he appointed me and has the right to ask for my resignation."

Rozier said when the office is first getting organized the student defender must be available for at least 20 hours a week. Beyond that, the job requires from 10 to 15 hours a week, which Rozier said he was not able to give.

Bratt has already interviewed possible appointees, and a decision will be made and brought before the Executive Council Feb. 8.

In the meantime, traffic court will continue, as Rozier will act as student defender until a new one is appointed.

The decision was in no way related to the removal of the ASBYU attorney general, Rozier said.

'Viva el Papa!' Mexicans shout

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II bade an emotional farewell to Mexico City on Wednesday, the final day of his week-long "pilgrimage of faith."

The pope, sunburned after speaking for days in the broiling sun, addressed a gathering of students shaded by an umbrella.

The Polish-born pontiff drew long and loud applause when he departed from his prepared text and in almost faultless Spanish told the crowd, "I lack the words to explain what I feel deeply in my heart. I lack words ... I just lack words."

Police estimate the pope's appearances have drawn nearly 20 million people during his travels in Mexico.

The pope's remarks were interrupted time and again with the cheer, "Viva el Papa!" Many in the crowd, estimated by police at 250,000, waved white and yellow handkerchiefs — the Vatican colors.

John Paul appealed to Latin American students to develop "a climate of integral conception of the human being, scientific rigor, a Christian outlook of man, life and society, and of moral and religious values."

The crowd broke into a spontaneous chant, "Poland, Poland, Poland, long live Poland!"

The pope, visibly moved by the reception, ended his final message saying: "Work, you young people. You professors, teach them. All of you work for a better future for your countries, for Mexico and for other Latin American countries."

Limit proposed on state spending

A BYU professor who is member of the Utah House of Representatives is sponsoring a bill setting a constitutional limit on state spending.

Rep. LeRay L. McAllister, R-Orem, a leading House Republican and co-chairman of the Executive Committee on Appropriations, is designing a "broad and general" bill which would set a constitutional limit on the amount of money the Legislature can appropriate for state spending.

Basically, McAllister's bill would limit spending to the previous year's amount plus a percentage of that amount equal to the increase in personal income within the state.

For example, if the state spent $1 million and the personal income increase was 10 percent, the Legislature could appropriate a spending increase of $100,000. The Legislature could never exceed the percentage of change in the personal income increase.

McAllister also proposes that the Legislature set a statutory limitation which could be changed if it proved to be insufficient.

Opponents of McAllister's bill say that a constitutional amendment should be strictly worded so the Legislature could not make changes easily, as would be the case with a statutory limitation.

McAllister said that, one way or another, a constitutional limitation would probably be a major part of this year's legislation.

"The tax limitation issue is going to be one of the most controversial issues the Legislature will face," he said. "The mood of the Legislature is that there should be a constitutional amendment but the question is in what form."

Mandatory meeting today for ASBYU candidates

A mandatory meeting for all ASBYU candidates and their campaign workers, and anyone else interested in this year's studentbody elections, will be held at 10 a.m. today in 562 ELWC.

Paul Brown, ASBYU Elections Committee chairman, said rules governing the elections will be outlined and questions concerning proper campaign procedures will be answered.

According to ASBYU bylaws, the Elections Committee must have the rules meeting one month prior to the nominations convention, which is exactly one month from Thursday.

Thursday's meeting will also provide an opportunity for candidates to meet and get to know the members of the elections committee.

Perhaps it's contagious...

FAIRFIELD, Ohio (AP) — When Glenn Jones arrived home from the hospital where his wife had given birth to twins, he found the family dog Tippy licking eight new puppies.

Surveying the household that grew tenfold last week, the Fisher Body plant worker said, "I'm glad I don't have a cat."

"Loaded with talent"

Watts reviews cagers

By CHUCK GATES
Universe Sports Writer

"...what an outstanding man Coach Watts has been in our profession; what an outstanding man he has been at Brigham Young; and what an outstanding man he has been to the youth of our nation.

Adolph Rupp.

He's Mr. Basketball for thousands of BYU fans everywhere, and rightfully so. His 431 career victories speak for themselves. His two National Invitational Tournament wins and eight conference championships rank him with all of the great ones — Wooden, Rupp, Meyer...

From 1949, when he took over the head coaching reins from Floyd Millet, until a bout with cancer forced his early retirement in 1972, Stan Watts was Cougar basketball, guiding BYU through the "golden years."

We're not sitting out here on a pinacle all by ourselves. The competition is still going to be tough.

With the departure of Watts from the active coaching ranks, the golden years came to a rather abrupt halt at BYU. Cougar fans hadn't had a winner to cheer in the Marriott Center since Glenn Potter's 19-7 team in 1973.

But a light has finally appeared at the end of the tunnel and with the play of this season's team there is talk of another string of golden years. Is Cougar basketball really back in town?

Who is better qualified to shed insight into this question than the man who guided BYU into national prominence back in the '50s and '60s?

Reclining in an easy chair at his Provo home and looking spry for his 77 years, Watts reminisced over some of the golden years highlights and added his own assessments of the current Cougar squad.

"We used to run and shoot. I like that style. The kids like it and the people like it," Watts said concerning the offensive style he perfected at BYU — a style similar to that employed so successfully by head coach Frank Arnold this season.

"Frank is the coach and knows what he wants," Watts said about his successor. "He's running a good show. I think he (Arnold) was wise when he went to the zone because he cut down his fouling and the zone sets up the fast break.

"We always felt that if we could get four of our team members in double figures that we could win. I think that is what we have this year," Watts said. "We have a good balanced ball club with speed and they're good shooters."

Watts said he feels this year's team is loaded with players who know how to get the ball through the hoop. "Scott Runia is a great shooter. Devin Durrant is a great shooter. Fred Roberts shoots outside well and Danny Ainge can beat you more ways than one. He's a good driver, smart and a pretty good shooter."

When asked if he felt BYU was out of the basketball woods yet, Watts said, "I think that they're coming out. With the material this year the season is very promising.

"The Ainge kid has always been a great player in my mind and Runia has always been a great player. It's a fine guard line; they're the kind of players we used to like to have," Watts continued.

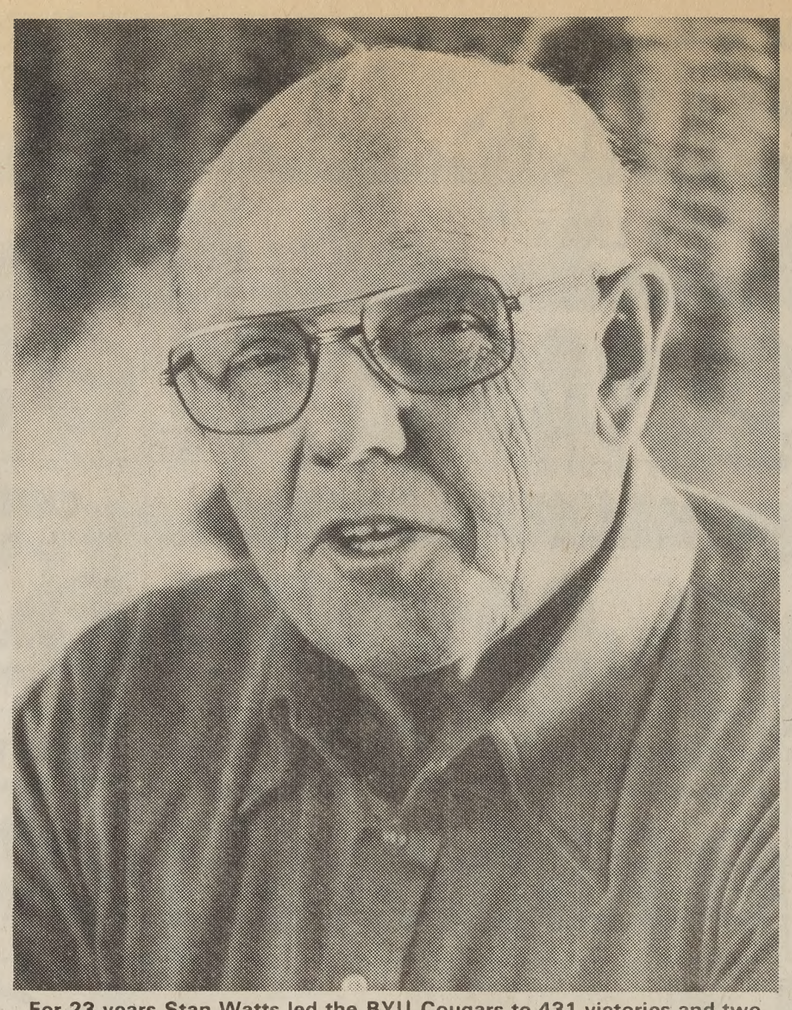
"With Durrant and Fred Roberts in there - of course they're maturing with each ball game. Roberts has great potential and Durrant has a lot of ability. We used to talk about fluidity in a player and we'd liken it to an automatic transmission. Durrant has that," Watts said.

"I've been very impressed with Alan Taylor too. I always worried about his speed but he's worked on it very hard and he's doing a good job inside. We found that everytime we won the championship, we had to have that good big man inside," Watts said.

Watts was quick to add that the road back to the top was going to be a rough one for the Cougars. In view of the conference this year and in the years to come, the competition will be challenging, Watts said.

"We're not sitting out here on a pinnacle all by ourselves; the competition is still going to be tough. The league as a whole is a young league," Watts continued.

Does the coach miss the hardwood? You bet he does, but he knows his place too. "Leave the oldtimers out and let them watch from the sideline" is Watts' philosophy. Interestingly enough, that's where you'll find Watts every home game, playing the part of BYU's No. 1 fan.



For 23 years Stan Watts led the BYU Cougars to 431 victories and two NIT championships. Watts feels the balance of speed and quickness of this year's team will bring BYU its first WAC championship in seven years.

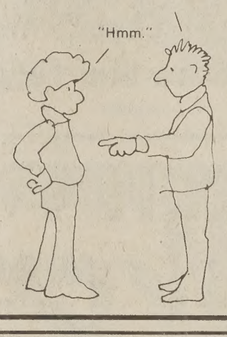
"Student Development is a group of students who want to help BYU. One way the Student Development raises money is through a Telefund. A telefund consists of student volunteers who call each student in the university and ask for a small contribution."

"The student can designate that his or her gift be used to support one of the three BYU Institutes or the University in general."



"Student Development has also looked outward as well as inward for financial support. Members have made many visits to businesses asking their executives for contributions-with suprisingly happy results!"

"In fact, this year friends of the University will match every student contribution. This means that if the telefund raises $30,000, another $30,000 will be given to the University."

Irish retain AP pinnacle despite close voting

It took 11 weeks, but Indiana State finally lost —off the court, that is.

Notre Dame, despite garnering only 15 first-place ballots to the Sycamores' 32 and losing a game in the final seconds to Maryland last week, retained the No. 1 position in The Associated Press college basketball poll Tuesday.

The Irish received 1,124 points in balloting by a nationwide committee of sports writers and broadcasters, edging Indiana State, which is a perfect 18-0, by a mere 13 points in one of the closest votes in AP poll history.

While Notre Dame and Indiana State were battling hard for the No. 1 spot, last week's rash of upsets created wholesale changes among the rest of the Top Ten. Listed below are this week's AP Top Twenty:

1.	Notre Dame	12-2
2.	Indiana State	18-0
3.	Duke	14-3
4.	N. Carolina	15-3
5.	UCLA	14-3
6.	Louisville	17-3
7.	Ohio St.	13-4
8.	Syracuse	18-2
9.	Georgetown, D.C.	16-2
10.	Louisiana St.	15-3
11.	Texas	15-4
12.	Marquette	14-3
13.	Alabama	13-4
14.	Illinois	16-4
15.	Michigan St.	11-5
16.	Texas A&M	18-4
17.	Maryland	14-5
18.	Temple	15-3
19.	Arkansas	13-4
20.	Vanderbilt	14-4

Sideline Chatter

Nominated by a selection committee of 100 coaches, sports information directors and sportswriters throughtout the country, 6-5 junior Tina Gunn has been selected as one of 30 finalists for the 1979 Wade Trophy Player of the Year Award.

The Wade Trophy was named in honor of Margaret Wade, women's basketball coach at Delta State University, who coached her team to two straight AIAW national basketball championships.

Last year Carol Blazejowski received the first Wade Trophy. Blazejowski averaged 38.5 points per game last year.

Gunn is currently averaging 35.3 points per game, 15.1 rebounds per game and is hitting 64 percent from the field.

Named All-conference last year, Gunn has been named to this year's all-tournament teams of the San Francisco Muni-Bus Invitational and the Copper Classic.

Danny Ainge continues to top all scorers in the WAC this week with a 20.0 point average. Freshman forward Devin Durrant jumped three notches to ninth with a 15.9 average.

Junior center Alan Taylor retains top spot in the rebounding category with 10.5 rebounds per game. Taylor also moved up one notch in scoring to take over the No. 16 spot. The 6-10 Californian also holds third place in field goal conversions, having notched a .587 percentage.

In conference play, the Cougars have three players among the top 10 scorers. Ainge, Durrant and Scott Runia hold down the second, fourth and ninth spots respectively.

Congratulations go out to Weber State for breaking into the UPI Top Twenty in basketball. The Wildcats were listed as 20th in the weekly poll and is the first Big Sky team to break into national ranking.

Carillon bells-challenging job

By MARCI JUDD
Universe Staff Writer

...arolde Harris of BYU's music ...artment has been getting plenty of ...cise lately. Several times a week, ...limbs the 108 steps to the top of ...J's carillon bell tower.

"My only complaint is that the ...er's circular staircase wasn't built ...nyone my height," said the 6-foot-...ch professor.

...arris, who was appointed as BYU's ... carillonneur two weeks ago, is ...acing Dr. John Longhurst, who left ...J more than a year ago to become ... new Tabernacle Choir organist. ...ce that time, the bells have been ...ed by various graduate students ... other experienced carillon bell ...ers.

"Two of the students, Gordon ...nston and Elizabeth Forsyth, will ...tinue to rotate with Harris on the ...s for daily concerts at noon and ...re and after devotional assemblies.

...arris, who refers to himself as a ...lyboard person," says he has a lot to ...n about playing carillon bells.

"Fortunately, though, my ...sicianship and familiarity with the ...board helps," Harris said.

...eferring to Dr. Longhurst's leaving ...U to play for the Tabernacle Choir, ...ris joked, "You would think this is ...igh as you could get." The carillon-...r's quarters are situated near the ... of the 97-foot tower.

"...hough Harris has taught in the ...sic department for nine years and ... retains many of his former respon-...ilities, he admits he has "already ...wn attached to the bells."

"Although the bells are big and ...ssive," he said, "a carillon is really ...ensitive instrument that must be ...yed tenderly."

"...ince he is new at "carilloning," ...rris has yet to accumulate the ...uses on his hands that carillon-...rs are notorious for having.

"Luckily, I have some finger protec-... to wear when I get sore fingers," he ...d.

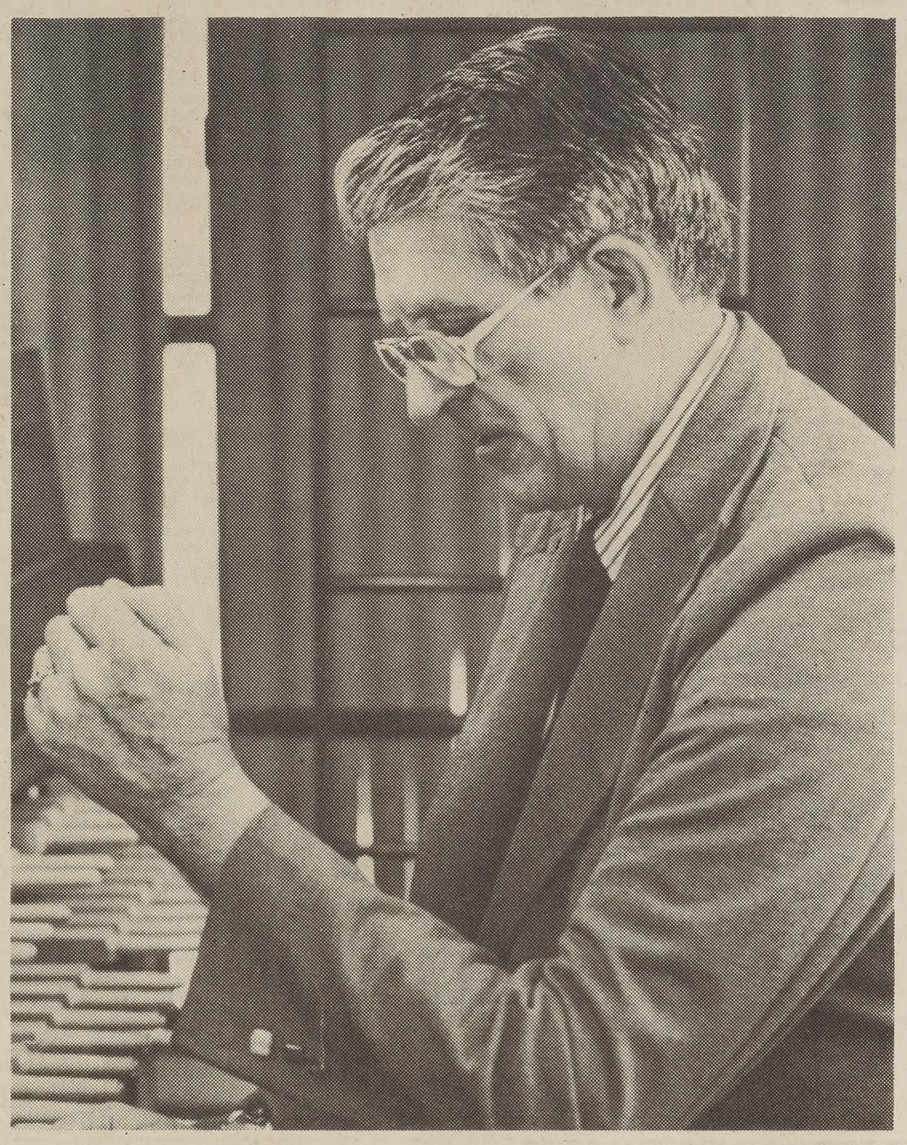
"Of approximately 100 carillon bell ...ers in the United States, Harris ...ds BYU's the only "Mormon" ...illon, resulting in a shortage of LDS ...sic and hymn arrangements for the ...illon.

"Eventually, I hope to be able to do ...e writing and arranging of LDS ...sic on my own," Harris said.

Harris added that he enjoys creating variations of familiar songs to play on the bells, but "I have a hard time playing 'Chopsticks,' because when the bells are close together in pitch, they beep."

BYU's carillon tower houses 52 bells, the largest of which is five feet in diameter and weighs almost 5,000 pounds. The smallest bell measures only seven inches.

"The cost of the tower was more than $260,000, and the school received a lot of criticism before it was finished, because of the high price," Harris said, "but since the first concert, I haven't heard one negative comment."



"Eventually I hope to do some writing and arranging of LDS hymns for the bells," says Jarolde Harris, newly appointed BYU carillonneur. Harris, a BYU music professor, replaces John Longhurst, who left to become Mormon Tabernacle organist.

'Mr. Horn:' tracker, cowboy, subject of CBS special movie

(AP) — Tom lives enough lives to keep an entire series going. Two of those lives are the basis for a two-part CBS movie, "Mr. Horn."

Horn tracked down the Apache chief Geronimo in the 1880s, was a cavalry scout, champion rodeo cowboy, Pinkerton detective, soldier in the Spanish-American War and bounty hunter. The first and the last form the foundation for "Mr. Horn."

As a Pinkerton agent he brought in some of the West's most notorious desperadoes, but quit because he said it was too tame. He boasted about killing, saying: "I look at it as a business proposition and I think I have a corner on the market."

David Carradine stars as the icy, enigmmatic Tom Horn in the four-hour, two-part movie that airs Thursday and Saturday nights on CBS. The hard-drinking, closed-mouth Horn makes Gary Cooper sound like a chatterbox.

The part originally was written for Robert Redford by William Goldman, but Redford decided not to do it. It marks the television debut of Goldman, who won Academy Awards for writing "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid" and "All the President's Men."

'Guardian' shocking book, not written to entertain

Reviewed by
LON WILCOX

The cover calls it "a new experience beyond terror." The back cover claims it to be "the shocker of the year." Some readers and movie goers will be interested because this book is a sequel to The Sentinel, a successful book and movie.

Don't worry, this book is bound to make the movie scene just as Jeffrey Konvitz's earlier one did. But you won't see it reviewed in this paper and you won't see it advertised here, either. The Guardian is as much a book written to shock as to frighten. I doubt it was written to entertain.

It all began in The Sentinel, where a young model discovers that the Catholic Church has been given the responsibility of guarding the gate of Hell (or Hades if you prefer a gentler vernacular). This responsibility is so great that murder, deception and Watergate trickery are all excusable when the secret is threatened with exposure.

This is done through the agency of a Sentinel, a mortal soul who at one point in its life attempted suicide, and has been chosen to stand guard as a penance for its sin.

Unbelievable? Yes, especially to a Mormon culture. But Konvitz works hard to make it seem real.

The Guardian deals with the changing of the guard. The Sentinel of the previous book has fulfilled her assignment, and it's time for a new one to be called.

Konvitz starts the whole tale out with a scene involving bloody murder and attempted rape. This is followed by more murder, homosexual relationships and general mayhem. After all, if you want to shock the reader, do a good job.

Behind all of this raw life is Charles Chazen, a Manson-like character that is, in reality, Satan himself. Chazen works through various guises in his attempt to thwart the exchange of assignment between the old and new Sentinels.

If you like books about good vs. evil, where good wins, forget it. This book follows the path of "The Omen" in that evil carries the day and mankind can just give up in despair. Even worse, Konvitz manages to leave an opening for a third book where Satan begins his bid for power and either wins, or God creates a miraculous rescue for man.

The Guardian is written by Jeffrey Konvitz and published by Bantam Books. The cost is $1.95, but it isn't worth the time and money to buy, or the time to read. In fact, there are those who will be upset if they find it in the Bookstore. After all, the world is terrible enough with incidents like the People's Temple and teenagers who shoot at elementary school staff and students because it's Monday and they're bored, without going out of our way to create more of the same.

No smell has got her goat

CLARCONA, Fla. (AP) — Billy Butler's lack of body odor has brought him national fame.

A recent story about the 17-year-old odorless goat brought a flood of mail and calls from around the country from people who also want a goat that doesn't smell, said Mrs. Louise Bolle, Billy's keeper.

Mrs. Bolle and other members of her farm family in this tiny community near Orlando told about the ram's little kingdom, where he is exclusively used to breed a different kind of goat.

Billy is about half the size of a regular goat and, because of a glandular defect, he has no odor. Neither do his kids.

Billy and his harem produce some 40 minigoats a year, trained and sold as pets for $3 apiece by Mrs. Bolle.

"They're a special Florida breed," Mrs. Bolle says. "They have no fleas, no rabies, no distemper and no odor. And they're housetrained.

Mrs. Bolle has been getting so many inquiries that "we had to write a form letter," she says. Currently there is a backlog of 300 orders until Billy sires more kids, she said. "You would understand the interest if you'd ever been on a goat farm," one caller said. "They stink to high heaven."

County youth home seeks 'strong willed' volunteers

The new Youth Home of Utah County is looking for students to help with their volunteer program, said Kristy Rogers, vice president of ASBYU Student Community Services.

The Youth Home serves as a secure stopping place for youths, ages 7 to 18, who have committed some type of offense until the courts decide where to place them, Miss Rogers said. The youths stay there from two days to a month and receive counseling, schooling, meals, clothing, lodging, and recreational activities.

Miss Rogers said the main message to be taken to the youths is that "someone cares." She said the young people have spare time when nothing is planned for them. Volunteers are needed to help the youths with activities such as sports, games, and arts and crafts.

Students are needed who are strong-willed. Miss Rogers explained that some of the youths have a poor image of society and also of BYU students. She said the young people could tear down the self-images of the students if they do not have good ones.

Interested students should contact the Student Community Services Office, 449 ELWC. An appointment will be set up with Robin Parker at the Youth Home. Students will be guided and counseled throughout the program.

The Youth Home of Utah County is situated at 9155 S. Dakota Lane in Provo. It is funded by the Utah County government and the Utah Social Services.

Dating series to discuss anxiety

"Making Anxiety Work for You" is the topic for this week's Experiment in Dating series, today at 10 a.m. in the Varsity Theater.

Dr. Jonathan Chamberlain, psychologist at the Counseling Center, will be conducting this week's series with Marilyn Whipple assisting him.

Chamberlain said, "We will be presenting ideas on how to help individuals use their feelings and possibly their fears to serve them in a positive way."

Some of the future topics to be discussed will be communication on a date, how to make a date great, and the blind date.

State requests island

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The State of Utah filed suit Wednesday in 2nd District Court seeking condemnation of 23,469 acres of Antelope Island in Great Salt Lake for a state park.

The complaint, filed by Assistant Attorney General Donald S. Coleman on behalf of the state Division of Parks and Recreation, asks the court to declare the amount of money the state must pay to purchase the island.

The state now owns only 2,000 acres on the northern end of the island, an area used as a state park. But park officials want the rest of the island to expand facilities to include hiking trails, marinas, picnic and camping areas, a visitor's center, beaches and restrooms.

One of the 12 defendants in the suit is Antelope Island Cattle Co. of Denver, Colo., a subsidiary of Anshuctz Corp. of Denver, the present owner.

Forest managers to meet for plant training workshop

Forest managers from the National Forest Service will be at BYU Friday and Saturday for a special workshop on threatened and endangered plants.

Carolyn Allen, college coordinator of conferences and workshops, said the two-day workshop is designed to help forest managers become "aware of potential dangers and situations that would cause plants to become endangered."

Dr. Stanley L. Welsh, professor of botany and range sciences at BYU, said there are about 100 species in Utah that could become threatened and 50 that could become endangered. He said there are presently two plants that are threatened or endangered.

Welsh will be teaching the workshop along with Dr. Duane Atwood, zone biologist with the Uinta National Forest Service. A second series of workshops will be held Feb. 8 and 9.

'None of above' write-in asked

PIERRE, S.D. (AP) — "None of the Above" ought to be last choice on the South Dakota ballot in 1980, a state senator says.

Sen. Don Frankenfeld, R-Rapid City, says people should be able to vote for a blank space if they don't like any of the candidates.

"Voters often feel they are given a choice between Tweedledum and Tweedledee," Frankenfeld said.

He has introduced a bill requiring the number of votes for "none of the above" to be tallied and published with the official election results.

"In fact, the winner of a race may find out he might be only slightly less distasteful than his opponent," Frankenfeld said.

He couldn't get any other lawmakers to put their names on the bill. "I think they're afraid it might cause them some embarrassment," he said.

ASBYU seeks help

Students interested in a public relations experience can apply now for positions on the Public Relations Committee of the ASBYU vice president's office, says Reed Markham, newly-appointed chairman of the committee.

Opportunities are availible on the committee in writing, photography and advertising, Markham said.

A "Better BYU Committee" has also been formed this semester and students are being solicited to become members. Applications for both committees are availible in the ASBYU offices, fourth floor ELWC, and deadline for submission is Feb. 9.

More information can be obtained from Markham at 373-8073.

Gordon Lassen, Utah Valley Hospital respiratory therapist, explains the uses of newborn intensive care equipment. Lassen recently was in Chile training doctors in the use of the monitors.

Medical center

Chilean infant care improved by LDS gift

By KIM HANSEN
Universe Staff Writer

The combination of $20,000 worth of equipment donated by the LDS Church and the expertise of Gordon Lassen, Utah Valley Hospital respiratory therapist, has made the University of Chile Medical Center in Santiago Chile's leading center for newborn intensive care.

It all started in late November 1978, when the Welfare Services Department of the LDS Church donated approximately $20,000 worth of newborn intensive care equipment to the University of Chile Medical Center. The only problem was that no one in Chile knew how to operate the sophisticated equipment.

Fortunately, an LDS welfare services missionary in Chile was acquainted with Lassen and suggested that he could teach them how to use the machines. The arrangements were made and Lassen spent two weeks last December teaching several doctors the necessary techniques.

"It was a tremendous experience for me," Lassen said. "It turned out far greater than I had anticipated." Though he worked with a total of 14 doctors, Lassen spent most of his time instructing four pediatricians at the medical center.

The donated equipment includes several different monitoring devices and a "Baby Bird" transport isolette. Almost all of the equipment has never been used in Chile. "In fact," Lassen said, "the transcutaneous oxygen monitor which automatically measures oxygen pressure in critically ill infants is only the second of its kind in South America." The other unit is in Brazil.

Chile's infant mortality rate is relatively high. About 30 newborns per 1000 die. By comparison, approximately 5 per 1000 die in Utah.

Ten thousand babies are born each year at the 400-bed University of Chile Medical Center. By contrast, Utah Valley Hospital, one of the busiest maternity centers in the U.S., had 5,846 births during 1978.

Medical technology in Chile is primitive by U.S. standards. However, this does not deter the spirit of the medical personnel. "In fact," Lassen said, "the desire of these people to do their very best is greater than I've ever seen. They will often spend 24 hours a day in the nursery. Whatever they lack in technology, they make up for in care."
